Mueller Steam Specialty™

Mueller Steam Specialty began as a small specialty manufacturer servicing the valve industry, and incorporated in 1956 to start manufacturing pipeline strainers. Today, in addition to a full range of pipeline and specialty strainers, the company manufactures a broad offering of check valves and butterfly valves.

Check valves are used in numerous applications where liquid must pass in only one direction for safety purposes and to prevent reverse flow. Mueller offers several types of high-performance check valves in a wide range of functionality suitable for commercial, process industries, and utilities, such as:

CHEXTER™ Check Valves. This self-actuating check valve responds automatically to changes in pressure and flow within a system. Its slim, face-to-face dimension saves space by allowing the valve to fit in close piping arrangements. CHEXTER™ adapts to all flow conditions and closes prior to reverse flow in the system, thereby preventing water hammer. The eccentric mounting and contoured design yield flow coefficients much higher than most check valves. Its only moving part is a disc that opens at very low differential pressure.

SURE CHECK VALVES

SURE CHECK Valves are used in a variety of liquid and gas applications to prevent flow reversal and associated surge and water hammer and are designed for vertical and horizontal flow applications. They are available in a range of configurations and sizes, including compact dimensions for limited spaces as well as multiple pressure classes and material construction. Integrated elastomer seats allow complete sealing.
